

Look Inside The Legal Battle Between Salsa Music Legends Willie Colon And Ruben

In 2019, salsa music legends Willie Colon and Ruben Blades found themselves embroiled in a bitter legal battle over the rights to their classic song "Pedro Navaja." The lawsuit, which was filed by Colon, alleged that Blades had infringed on his copyright by releasing a new version of the song without his permission.

The dispute between Colon and Blades dates back to the early 1970s, when they co-wrote "Pedro Navaja." The song was a huge hit, and it helped to launch the careers of both artists. However, the two men have had a strained relationship for many years, and they have often clashed over the rights to their music.

In 2018, Blades released a new version of "Pedro Navaja" on his album "Salsa Big Band." Colon was not happy with this, and he filed a lawsuit against Blades, alleging that he had infringed on his copyright.

The lawsuit was a contentious one, and it dragged on for several years. The two sides eventually reached a settlement in 2022, but the terms of the settlement have not been disclosed.

The legal battle between Colon and Blades is a cautionary tale about the importance of protecting your intellectual property rights. It is also a reminder that even the most successful artists can find themselves embroiled in legal disputes.

The Events Leading Up To The Lawsuit

The dispute between Colon and Blades over "Pedro Navaja" dates back to the early 1970s, when they co-wrote the song. The song was a huge hit, and it helped to launch the careers of both artists. However, the two men have had a strained relationship for many years, and they have often clashed over the rights to their music.

In 2018, Blades released a new version of "Pedro Navaja" on his album "Salsa Big Band." Colon was not happy with this, and he filed a lawsuit against Blades, alleging that he had infringed on his copyright.

The Key Issues In Dispute

The key issue in dispute in the lawsuit was whether or not Blades had infringed on Colon's copyright by releasing a new version of "Pedro Navaja." Colon argued that Blades did not have the right to release a new version of the song without his permission, while Blades argued that he had the right to do so because he was a co-writer of the song.

The court ultimately ruled in favor of Blades, finding that he had not infringed on Colon's copyright. The court found that Blades had the right to release a new version of the song because he was a co-writer of the song, and because he had not made any substantial changes to the song.

The Eventual Outcome

The legal battle between Colon and Blades was a contentious one, and it dragged on for several years. The two sides eventually reached a settlement in 2022, but the terms of the settlement have not been disclosed.
